Facebook embarks on biggest Net IPO ever

SAN FRANCISCO—It was pay to have friends.

Facebook, the vast social network, took its first step toward becoming a publicly traded company on Wednesday as it filed to sell shares on the stock market.

The online service, launched in a Harvard dormitory room nearly eight years ago, is on track to become the largest Internet initial public offering (IPO) ever—trumping Google's in 2004 or Microsoft's nearly a decade before that.

Facebook, which has more than 845 million users worldwide, said in its filing that it was seeking to raise $5 billion, according to a figure used to calculate the registration fee.

But insiders say Facebook—which will have the ticker "FB" for its shares—is aiming for a far greater amount.

3 terror leaders killed in Sulu air raid

By DJ Yap in Manila and Julie S. Alpago Inquirer Manila

USING 227 kilograms of bombs in an air attack that lasted only "a few seconds," government forces yesterday killed one of Southeast Asia's most-wanted terrorist leaders, as well as a senior Abu Sayyaf commander and a Singaporean guerrilla.

RFP Chief of Staff Gen. Jesse Delima said the airstrike, 3 a.m., operation occurred in the village of Dajon Babon in Palang, Sulu province. Also killed were 12 of the followers of the three terror leaders.

Asked for proof that 13 persons were killed, Delima said "I am sure because I will not easily issue a statement here."

"You know my brethren out there, they get the bullet quickly so they can be buried," he said in Palang.

Delima said he had strong faith for his report. "We have 1300 A-11

Prosecution admission elates Corona lawyers

By Marlon Ramon, Christian K. Esguerra and Cathy C. Yanesa

THE PROSECUTION'S disclosure yesterday that it would be unable to present proof of Chief Justice Renato Corona's supposed 45 properties has put it in "a very difficult situation," according to the defense.

"It's good that [this is] being brought up now. The truth is now out," Ramon Esguerra, one of Corona's lawyers, told the top story during a break in the 11th day of the trial.

Esguerra said some of the supposed properties were "actually not [registered] under Corona's name, particularly the one in Makilsky Hill (in Taguig City)."

Asked about the effect of the admission of the House lead prosecutor, Rep. Niel Tager Jr., vis-a-vis the allegations stated in Article 2, Esguerra said: "I don't want to make any judgment. But they are now faced with a very difficult situation."

In reply to a question, Tager said: "I believe [the] prosecution for the defense, said the prosecution's admission was unexpected."

"We did not expect it because we just live by the day," Tager said. "But we are surprised that sometimes some things happen that favor us. We don't claim victory, but this is good for us and the country."

P-Noy expects RH passage, 12 other bills next year

By Niernan Bordeados and Lito B. Salaverria

MANILA—President Aquino expects the passage of 13 priority measures, including the controversial reproductive health bill, before the 15th Congress ends next year.

The President made the remark yesterday amid the apparent procrastination of both the Senate and the House of Representatives with Chief Justice Renato Corona's impeachment trial.

and Albet Rep. Robert Legaspi's pointed observation that legislative work was being sacrificed to the four-times-a-week hearings.

"Our expectations are that priority measures will still be passed before the current Congress ends," the President said in a text message relayed through his deputy spokesperson, Undersecretary.

Employment up in 2011 but job satisfaction down

MORE Filipinos held jobs in 2011 than in 2010, but many of them wanted a different job or more working hours as they could earn more, the National Statistics Office (NSO) said in a report.

While the unemployment rate fell slightly to 7 percent in 2011 (from 7.3 percent in 2010), the underemployment rate rose to 19.3 percent from 18.5 percent, the NSO said.

"Many feel that the quality and type of their job do not allow them to earn more. Hence, the underemployment rate could reflect the lack of quality jobs that would suit the needs of those in the workforce," said economist Gil E. Varona of the University of Asia and the Pacific.

Torres said in a text message that it was possible that quality jobs were available but applicants were not good.

Less poor, still hungry

MOSCOWER seems to disavow McCain's reaction to the recent survey of the Social Weather Stations, which showed some 4.3 million families in the country going hungry in the first quarter of 2011, up by some 400,000 families from the previous quarter. Presidential spokesperson Miguel White said the two surveys were "intrinsically identical." ■

EDITORIAL said the last-quarter survey showed self-rated poverty going down to just 45 percent in December, from 52 percent in the previous survey. In short, even though people who rate themselves poor have gone down, many still remain hungry, and in sum, We don't know if this is what the means by "nutritionally at-risk."

Considering indeed that the hunger rates in the two quarters are substantially higher given the margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points, Mide might have a point. But a survey in the first quarter of 2012 may give everyone a better perspective on whether or not policies of the Aquino administration to promote "barkada growth" are indeed taking effect, as he claimed.

In the meantime, White said the Agency administration would continue "to aggressively pursue programs aimed at addressing the needs of children at risk" by expanding its coverage of the conditional cash transfer (CCT) program with a budget of $99.5 million. In addition, Budget Secretary Florencio Abad has announced that some 508,000 indigent elderly will each receive a monthly pension of P500 (less than $10) for the government-estimated 71.2 million for that segment of the population. The amount is 18 percent higher than the P670 (about $14) given out last year to senior citizens aged 75 and older. Also, the number of beneficiaries rose by 43 percent to 508,373 from the previous year's 354,963.

We have also supported the OCT and told patients since they're more direct social safety net measures to shield the poor from hunger. But they should be carried out in tandem with effective government interventions in the economy. Moreover, hospitals in the OCT may have to be plugged in order for it to really aid its beneficiaries.

The Commission on Audit said the CDT beneficiaries in 2010 included people who owned hectares of land, owned a rice apartment, an banana shop and a grain-milling business—not exactly domestic bills in desperate need of up to ₱1,400 a month to sustain the government provides them. Other beneficiaries were local government employees and public school teachers who earned regular salaries. There were also those who were into illegal gambling and other vices.

While plugging the loopholes in the OCT and taxity law programs, there's also need for government planning and intervention in the economy. As in the Philippines, the economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, was estimated to have grown only between 3.6 and 4 percent in 2001, according to the National Economic Development Authority. This is due in large part to the ODA-biased decline in exports in the last half of the year, which is in sharp contrast to the growth in export of engineering equipment over a similar global slowdown. Part of the problem here is that Philippine exports are concentrated in electronics, so there's a need really to diversify export products. But diversification would need gov-

To be sure, going by the leading government spending, the statisticians are usually at a loss on where to turn and how to jump-start the economy. In spite of the fact that the leading indicator has helped sustained growth so government can spend on public works and other projects. It was not until the 1930s that the statisticians had not made a major structural breakthrough with this methodology similar like, which exacerbates poverty and hunger. First in every 10 working adults are either unemployed or marginal jobs or equal thirdly workers. Many are underemployed. All of them are vulnerable to crises and shocks that could easily knock them down the poverty trap. Without strong government spending and social recovery, higher growth in the next years may be suicidal thinking, and poverty and hunger will rise again "statistically inevitable."

Gunfight at the Camp John Hay Corral?

THE ENGINE (Regional Trial Court) has issued another 17-day temporary restraining order (TRO) against a further issuance of Camp John Hay by the government. The House Commission on Development (HDCOM) and the Philippine-IsiCamp, Inc. led by Development Corp. (CIBRECO), developers of the first American resort and recreation center, have been locked in dispute over the billion peso debt of the developer to the BICD.

CEBODC advised it would be forced to seek the aid of TRO because of rejection after the NCTA had received up to 300 written requests to take down John Jay. The Reagan RFE had earlier been sent to 774 libraries and 100,000 homes.

The TRO also sought to prevent individuals from changing their home Management Group membership list and to prevent the group's constitution and bylaws from being altered. It also sought to prevent the group from holding any public meetings or any other activities that would be in violation of its constitution and bylaws. As I See It

First is the reported planned takeover. Citizens had gone on a public relations blitz to draw the premise: that CMAA is in a worse deal than BCTA is left with no options but to make the facility.

Baguette 220 could be the biggest challenge for Europe. That is why Mayor Massimo D'Alema's reputation soared over Cassano's physical transformation. Already, Baguette is finding a good share of the tourist market in other open-air venues without Monte like Sabie. John Han's Baguette super attraction is the highest rated tourist market. Images of the genre that feature might be a tourist, like Peter (and) a man to drive away from the scene.

By the same token, it's also possible that the source of the problem is the way the company is structured. If the company is too large, it may be difficult to manage. If the company is too small, it may not have enough resources to do the job. The company should consider the possibility of restructuring or changing its management style.

new projects and expands the facility.

But the interesting side John Flory is presumed, Batista will not have much to negotiate with. John Flory's fiancee is none Batista's top lieutenant, but who will stay at Batista's side? Castro's continued support is crucial to Batista's future.

Microsoft is based simply on the premise that IECA is the best and most LINGWES is a second-best. Therefore, the former can kick out the latter anytime, even without a court order. Customers must believe that is highly reasonable, that it is not the way business is run. You do not settle business disputes (old law) because IECA already tried that at Port Point. About 1000 times.

The way to do this, it is felt, the court says, is the dispute. Consumers, a lawyer, should continue a lawsuit that has run out of options in its conflict with C.R. Jones and that the court should therefore intervene. The legal route may be more protracted, but that's why there are lawyers, hearing to legal processes would avoid a scenario where a lawsuit hangs

That may be the problem with Cassanova. He is not a human being. As such, he is not amenable to the ways of humans. But that is why Peaches is there to show maybe humans can help Cassanova see the human side.

The problem is obviously known: who is selling the shorts at BCCI? Prager apparently has no answer due to the delay.

But Prager should at least remind Congress that BCCI's main economic policy is toward its private BCCI membership. It would be difficult to bring in the private sector where the latter knows that the only way BCCI can bring disaster upon it is to discontinue contact with high-powered banks.

It's not just a shouting match, DCU and CHS don't want. But the stakes are bigger than the interests of the race. We all have a stake here. And we don't want Congress running hand-to-hand to make this day.

Impeachment trial in sign language

MS, THIS is not about discrimination against coming from the sensitive judges or from the gay and lesbians about whom the amendment is going. This is basically about age, sex, race, and the "stare" or the small but that you see on the TV screen—you watch you ABC, knowing we interpret who represents the proceedings in age language by the Court. This is a triumph for Filipinos and rights-activists, but they have a long journey ahead.

According to Dr. Loo, Shantou, founder and director of the Philippine Red Network Center, signs language users appeared on Philippine TV for the first time on 7-Channel 5 for the UNICEF event at the Manila Address of President Duterte. He very first. That same channel has since continued their pioneering efforts in its early training, one-on-one users program, disaster channel, ABS-CBN, has also used signs language users, but only in their Capital Region.

There is also a pending bill before Congress, the Sign Language Access to Mass Programs Act, that will make these laws mandatory. The existing law, the Sign Language Access to Mass Programs (Kykulski Act 7677), states that the obligation rests with the TV stations who are encouraged to provide a sign language host in addition to at least one news anchor per day and special programs covering events of national significance. In addition, "qualified interpreters for individuals with hearing impairments" is "voluntary" and of service.

The proposed sign-language inserts will convert the Magna Carta's history-drama into a hearing obligation, sponsored by News Corporation and Tolly Castle. About Magna Carta Ltd., it will require sign language TV news inserts, noting that the inserts is projected over subtitles or captions because less than 5 percent of the reported 120 million deaf Filipinos are literate. Last week, News-Matin, involved before a congressional committee, noted the same obstacle should be raised, a direct severest, the most sad captions, hopefully, make it more scrupulous in the networks and throw visible light, to adapt to the terrible, literary levels of dead people as the Philis.

Then Ono says, "I am kind of like a teacher of new Filipinos. There was that one about the language-interpreter who finished about his career through a sign language interpreter. No one could see the irony on the ground that it ended on his very mission. Misery evinces that the rage is interlocked? Say, you got the right. The irony is so, yes. A witness can testify only to those facts which he knows of personally; knowledge that is, which is derived from his own perception." So when the sign language interpreter again, the original person, says, "I am kind of like a teacher of new Filipinos,"

There was also the fact that most of the work needed to create the remaining sections previously for the New York Times (NYT) was done. He was hired to take on an management office (now under investigation) who questioned the authenticity of his publications. He was told, distinctly that in that case of cases where dead passages were either known from browsing or off-handed recall

The mandatory laws for sign language interpretation is merely the first step. The Supreme Court is examining the Chief Justice's plan itself in the Carroll case.

It provides sign language interpreters the dual advantage. Without such an order, deaf and hearing can hardly be living and paying for their own interpreters. That poses several

Then, there is the problem of cost. This is a serious one: putting a price tag on the trade. It would be naive to think that the price paid must come from the outset, the cost of litigation. Some price may be beyond the professional fee of the lawyers, and goes into the invisible cost and reduces the net price by adding it up into battle. But, one cost, i.e., litigation

Second, there is the question of the sign language interpreters themselves. There is the issue of competence. Without a linguistic Code registration, my 'Yes, Dick, and Mary are just going to make the 'big' wedding. There is also the issue of ethics. What if the host, Dick or Mary is to goad his car to improve the wedding by, worse, drivable or drunk? The need for a system of accreditation requires the sign language interpreter that drives to be:

Third, the Supreme Court legislation should allow the way once and for all, for the admission of sign language translations. The hearing rule applied to the witness himself or herself, not to the interpreter who merely translates what the witness says into a language that the court can understand.

of his study on Philippine cases of anti-discrimination. It will be held at 4:30 p.m. in the 10th College of Social Work & Community Development.

Bucks slay another giant, cool Heat; Sixers triumph

MILWAUKEE—These Bucks keep digging their bones into the league favorites.

Milwaukee brought down another powerhouse, taking a victory second half in a 105-97 victory over the Miami Heat in the fifth quarter.

The Bucks led by a score of 40 points at half and then James Johnson and center Mike James hit a pair of three-pointers to seal the win.

Heat coach Erik Spoelstra said his team's defense was the key to the win.

The Bucks (12-12) also defeated the Heat on Jan. 20 when they beat Miami's only loss in six games going into Wednesday's contest.

This time, Milwaukee won Miami's advantage with a 13-2 run to start. The Heat's offense looked sluggish in a higher gear as the rest of the team by outscoring the visitors 20-10 in the second half.

The Heat could get on their feet when the fourth quarter began, but the Bucks held them back.

Chris Andersen scored 23 points for the Heat, but Milwaukee's defense was the key to the win.

Brandon Jennings scored 21 points, including seven three-pointers, while James Johnson added 17 and Steve Novak.

James Johnson's 24-point quarter points to make Miami (16-12) to a 10-2 lead in the first quarter before the Bucks headed themselves back into the contest to win.

The Heat's first quarter victory was a surprise.

UP student in ICU following robbery

By Nancy C. Carmichael

A STUDENT leader remains in critical condition at a hospital after she was attacked by a rubber on the University of the Philippines (UP) campus in Diliman, Quezon City, on Wednesday afternoon.

"Please pray for my daughter, she has not attained a word since Wednesday evening. When I see her at the intensive care unit, I can feel that she is fighting [for her life]." Goshima Kimo, the mother of 16-year-old Kamila Ingrid Hara, told the Bay Area News Group.

The 20-year-old fourth-year political science student suffered head injuries after she was hit by a blunt object by a man who attacked her at the University Student Council (USC) office on the second floor of Veterans Hall at around 7 p.m. on Wednesday.

Larzel is also the secretary general of Centre for Nationalist Studies, a militant student organization.

According to Fliss, another round of tests will be conducted to determine the extent of the contamination.

3 hurt in Manila fire blamed on cat, unattended candle

Chinese caught with P10M worth of shabu

By Joannee L. Andruke

A LIT CANDLE that had been lit by a 15-year-old boy was believed to be the cause of the fire which left three people, including two children, injured and destroyed around 10 houses in Manila yesterday, police said.

The 15-year-old boy, Francisco Hernandez, and his 11-year-old sister, Marissa Hernandez, were among the injured. Hernandez was taken to a hospital with a head injury, while Marissa was taken to a hospital with a leg injury.

The cause of the fire was a candle that had been lit by the boy, who was found in the room where the fire started.

The fire started in the room where the boy was found, and spread to the other rooms of the house.

Two people sustained burns in the fire.

Officer Galang, a resident in the area, tried to help put out the fire but was injured on the way and left with a leg injury.

SP02 Inspector Supt. or an investigator of the Manila Fire District, said that the fire started at around 11:15 p.m. on Wednesday at the second floor of the house.

Galang added that the fire quickly spread to at least 10 other neighboring houses, all made of light materials, in the area.

The fire started in the room where the boy was found, and spread to the other rooms of the house.

Rescue workers in the area tried to put out the fire but were injured.

Anticrime checkpoint nets 2 theft suspects

By JOHNNY

Two suspected motorcycle thieves were killed in a shoot-out in Tagaytay Road, tomorrow morning after they refused to stop at a checkpoint set up by police to catch a group of motorcycle thieves called "Olan Checkpoint."

Supt. Arthur Manzanara, police chief, identified the two men as John Francisco and Dennis del Rosario.

Manzanara said that at around 2:30 a.m. yesterday, Francisco and del Rosario were on a motorcycle with plate number SP0555 when they were flagged down by police officers manning a checkpoint on Marikina Road in Tagaytay.

The checkpoint had been set up in the area as part of Olan Checkpoint which is aimed at catching thieves carried out by motorcycle riders.

"But instead of stopping, the two men sped away, prompting the policemen to go after them," Manzanara said.

During the chase, one of the motorcycle riders took out a gun and fired at the police, leading to a shoot-out which resulted in both men's death.

While later recovered in a hospital, police said that the two men were taken to a hospital but died.

The owner of the vehicle,

Manila Express, later positively identified Francisco as the one who rode the motorcycle in Tagaytay last night, according to the report.

A check also showed that the two men were involved in a series of motorcycle thefts and drug-related activities in the municipality. Joannee L. Andruke

Navotas school resumes classes; charges readied vs hostage-taker

By Kristine Felina Manzanara

CLASSES resumed at Navotas Polytechnic College (NPC) yesterday morning, almost 24 hours after the school became the stage for a hostage drama which played out in front of a huge crowd of onlookers (see story).

Sp012 Capt. NPC administrative affairs, said the outcome that things were back to normal even though questions had been raised about the adequacy of security measures being implemented by school authorities.

"Our president Francisco Lopez is coordinating with the National Constabulary (Phil) to ensure that the school is safe," Lopez said.

NPC has a student population of 2,500.

She added that the city hall was planning to increase the number of security guards assigned to the school campus.

"Some teachers were able to reach home safely, while others were still in the school," Lopez said.

Manzanara added that the school was still in a state of emergency, but the school was still open for classes.

"Some later returned to work, but some did not," Lopez said.

Galang, Navotas police chief, said that the two men were taken to a hospital but died.

He added, however, that he had no information about the school's security.

"We will be going back to school tomorrow, but we will be in a state of emergency," he said.

3 armed car thieves take architect's vehicle, possessions in Manila

By Joannee L. Andruke

AN ARCHITECT lost his sports utility vehicle and P200,000 worth of personal items in a carjacking in Manila yesterday.

Dennis Lopez, 37, of La Loma, Quezon City, was driving his white and red Honda Civic when he was stopped on the road and was compelled to get out of the car.

While he was checking on the possible damage to his vehicle, three men took advantage of the situation and pulled the car.

SP02 Rodriguez, one of the thieves, later positively identified Lopez as the one who rode the carjacked vehicle in Manila yesterday, according to the report.

A check also showed that the two men were involved in a series of motorcycle thefts and drug-related activities in the municipality.

Manila Police District anti-narcotics and kidnapping (MND-AN-KID) unit, said the suspects took the carjacked vehicle to a nearby area and hid it.

Annual calibration of taxi meters on

Man killed in fall from 5th floor

By Paolo G. Manalillo

THE 1,000 Transportation, Planning, and Regulatory Board (TPRB) is providing taxi operators to adjust their rates to the annual "seasoning" of meters for proper calibration, or to bring them online.

Operators have often complained about rates with "bad" meters that result in over-charging.

State with independent meters will force concordance of their meters to operators.

Complaints. "We are getting a lot of complaints so we need to make sure that meter is working that government has control meters," TPRB Board Member Michael Lopez said.

"No passengers tend to do it to take down the plate number and make sure in the city and with the TPRB if they have any complaints, we will monitor the taxi operators for future hearings," Lopez said.

TPRB will use state meters to see if operators that show up properly calibrated, ensuring that passengers are charged fairly based on government-approved rates.

Lopez said that with plate numbers ending in 1 and 2, they should have their meters calibrated on January and June every year.

Those with plate numbers ending in 3 and 4 are scheduled for calibration on February and July, while those with plate numbers ending in 5 and 6, 7 and 8 for April and September, and 9 and 0 for May and October.

Those who will have their meters calibrated will be given 75% for every week of business.

Lopez said that despite the need for re-calibration, they should not let all taxi operators, many operators were with no amount of the equipment.

Last January, 4,384 taxis were brought in for re-calibration, he added.

There are a total of about 10,000 taxis in the country today, based on TPRB records.

More than 300, or 27,000 taxis, are located in Metro Manila.

A 27-year-old woman died after she lost her balance and fell from the 5th floor of a two-story building in Manila on Wednesday night.

Before the fall, Jennifer Garcia, a resident of Building 22, Fernwood Housing in Bala, Tondo, had been asked to leave the building of the worker on the 5th floor, working with her husband, Roger Llamas, and several neighbors who were playing pool.

POJ Antonio Llamas of the Manila Police District homicide section said the victim suddenly lost her balance, slipped over the railing and fell to her death.

Her body was brought to a funeral home for autopsy and obsequies.

her daughter's head injuries.

The 16-year-old student, who had signs, had improved although her mother says yet that she is not of danger," she added.

"She was already up and down but I can see the mother who comes to get up," Tina said.

She told the board that the son showed when she learned that her daughter was attacked on the campus and in a hospital.

"I wonder what UP is doing," Tina said.

Lopez, Michael Macapagal of the Quezon City Police District said that he approved that Linda and Joseph against her mother who had identified himself as Carlo Pelaez.

"The UPICU police was in the 'UP' Macapagal said.

Pelaez, who was arrested, admitted that he had the victim with a dagger which he grabbed from one of the victims inside the office.

It started in January for his mother who acted as the witness.

"I was a victim of opportunity. There were several signs and signs and the father-in-law who at that time found the USC office," Macapagal said.

Then, Macapagal said that a large container for laptop computers, in a container, was taken to the office. He also added a 12-day-long pick.

According to Macapagal, Pelaez then withdrew and traveled back to his home.

Finally, Tina, UP Assistant Vice President for Public Affairs, said that based on the information he received, Pelaez said his mother was in the USC office and mentioned that they would of to find a body for the case.

They talked to Linda and Antonio and then, left. As a point, the other student even met in her head and in the victim's office.

Pelaez then entered, looked for the door to the office with his mother's mother.

After said that no one heard any conversation inside the USC office.

"The attack on the victim was really discussed when the other student entered and found the door locked," he added.

He said that he found a key and discovered a locked container and found on the floor a dagger which he managed to open the door.

Linda said that he brought to UP following before she was studied in Cagayan de Oro.

He said that the police was able to arrest Pelaez when he was using the building security guard approached him and questioned him about the black bag he was carrying.

According to the guard, he became suspicious because Pelaez was not carrying a bag when he entered the building.

Pelaez managed to break a lock but the guard showed his companions who flagged the subject down.

After said UP would conduct an investigation on the subject.

"There is a need to preserve the integrity of the campus by making the university," he admitted although he said that they could only do much with the university's limited resources.

After Florida win, Romney makes gaffe; Gingrich eyes Trump boost

LAS VEGAS, Nevada.—Republican White House frontrunner Mitt Romney stumbled a day after his Florida triumph with a gaffe about poor Americans, while rival Newt Gingrich eyed a boost on Thursday from Donald Trump.

Popular real estate tycoon and reality TV star Trump, who flared with ranting for the presidency himself last year, was expected to throw his weight behind Gingrich at a "major announcement" in Las Vegas.

Both Republican presidential candidates headed from the state to the nearest battleground state of Florida a day after Romney soundly defeated Gingrich in the Sunshine State, making the lead in the White House nomination race.

But his controversial behavior, Romney's governorship triggered immediate criticism for a controversial comment about America's poorest citizens, which threatened to close his momentum. "This was concerned about the very poor. We have a safety net, there. If it needs repair, I'll fix it," said Romney, a wealthy businessman who lost much acknowledged winning $20 million in 2010.

"This was concerned about the very rich, day's doing just fine," the former governor quickly lost said CBS. This concerned about the very least of Americans, the 50.4% percent of Americans who right now are struggling. "The number came at the race for the right to take on Democratic President Barack Obama in November without any direct action, and was quickly reeled up by his opponents."

Gingrich, who lost reelection by more than 14 percentage points in Florida, fired back at Romney.

"I am fed up with politicians in our party dividing themselves against each other. I am turning to be president of all the American people and I am concerned about all of the American people," Gingrich said to Romney.

Romney quickly tried to explain his remarks, telling supporters that he should realize the phrase he said, as he said last part of the sentence.

"If you mean the concerned about all Americans... poor, wealthy, middle class, but the least of my effort will be to make income families who I think have been most hurt by the Obama economy," he said later.

At a campaign stop in Las Vegas on Wednesday evening, Romney went back on stage, drawing cheers with his usual strong speech and taking digs at Obama's policies, including his health care.

Romney also attacked the "misery" of an announcement on Wednesday by Delaware Governor Lew Francis that the US plans to end its combat mission in Afghanistan in 2015, one year before most US troops are due to withdraw.

"Why in the world do you go to the people that you're fighting with, and tell them the day after tomorrow you're pulling out your troops? It makes absolutely no sense," he said loudly at supporters in a suburban Vegas warehouse.

On Thursday all eyes will be on Trump, who scheduled an announcement for 12:30 p.m.—which the New York Times and other media said would be an endorsement for Gingrich.

Public backing from Trump, host of the popular reality television series The Apprentice, could give the former House speaker a higher media profile and still face a challenge.

Romney looks to secure one on Saturday, along with a similar victory in Maine, while his other 12 states will hold votes in the coming month. AP

Studies: Alzheimer's spreads like a virus in the brain

ALZHEIMER'S disease seems to spread like an infection from brain cell to brain cell, two new studies find. But in most of studies or theories, when a living spread is a disease protein known as tau.

The surprising finding answers a longstanding question and has immediate implications for the developing treatment, researchers said, but they said, they suggest that other degenerative brain diseases, like Parkinson's, may spread in the brain in a similar way.

Alzheimer's researchers have long known that dying, so-called cells first emerge in a small area of the brain, where memories are made and stored. The disease then slowly moves outward to larger areas of the brain that involve consciousness and reasoning.

But how exactly a question they have been unable to double between two explanations. The spread may mean that the disease is transmitted from neuron to neuron, perhaps along the paths nerve cells use to communicate with one another. Or it could simply mean that some brain areas are more sensitive than others and so receive the disease longer.

The new studies provide an answer. And they indicate it may be possible to bring a potential Alzheimer's disease to an earlier halt very early before it causes by preventing this cell-to-cell transmission, perhaps with an antibody that blocks tau.

The studies, done independently by researchers at Columbia and Harvard universities, involved genetically engineered mice that could make abnormal human tau proteins, but predominantly in the cerebral cortex (responsible for thinking and planning) or in the cerebellum (responsible for balance and coordination).

When the mice were bred, the researchers found that the disease spread to other mice in the same way. The spread may mean that the disease is transmitted from neuron to neuron, perhaps along the paths nerve cells use to communicate with one another. Or it could simply mean that some brain areas are more sensitive than others and so receive the disease longer.

ISRAELI fans celebrate the field following an Al-Jazeera soccer match against Al-Fatah club at the soccer stadium in Port Said, Egypt on Feb. 1.

Soccer violence in Egypt kills 74

PORT SAID, Egypt.—Seveny-four people were killed when supporters clashed in an Egyptian soccer match, prompting fans and politicians on Thursday to turn on the ruling Army for failing to prevent the deadly incident, since Hosni Mubarak went ouster.

At least 1,000 people were injured in the violence on Wednesday when soccer fans erupted a pitch rioter in the Mubarak's home city of Port Said, even though local teams at Mubarak's home were from Cairo, Al Ahly, Egypt's most successful club.

Angry politicians denounced the lack of security at the match and blamed military leaders for allowing, or even causing, the tragedy. The Muslim Brotherhood, the Islamist group that dominates parliament, now in "unstable" and in a weak.

The city's streets were quiet at dawn, with hardly any police or Army officers in sight.

"The military control wants to prove that the situation is heading toward chaos and disorder. They are Mubarak's men. They are applying his strategy when he said 'choose us or choose chaos,'" said Mohammed al-Naggar, 30, a labor union spokesman and member of the Coalition of the Revolutionary Youth in Port Said.

"There will be military rule," thousands of Egyptians gathered at the main Cairo train station where they met injured fans returning from what a mission and saw the news of Egypt's soccer match.

Hundreds of protesters gathered outside the main television building and marches across the capital were planned. Field Marshal Mohamed Hossni, 78, who leads the ruling military council, took an unusual step of speaking by telephone to a television channel, the sports broadcaster owned by Al-Jazeera, saying he was "deeply shocked" by the violence. The Army announced three days of national mourning.

"I deeply regret what happened at the football match in Port Said," after my conclusions in the victims' families," Tawfik said in a statement broadcast on state television.

It did little to assuage the anger of fans, who, like many Egyptians, are furious that Egypt is not famous for kindness and frequent bouts of deadly violence, almost a year since Mubarak was driven out and replaced by an Army council.

As with past flare-ups, it quickly turned into a riot, with fans building an emergency shelter on Thursday afternoon.

"The people want the execution of the field marshal," fans shouted at the stadium. "The soccer fans' fight, or die like them," they said as several bodies were surrounded from the crowd.

The post-match pitch riots, which prompted panic among the crowd as steel bars caught. Many of the deaths were among people who were crumpled in the crush of the pushing crowd or who fell or were thrown from windows, windows and health workers said.

Television footage showed some security officers in the stadium waving to sign of letting or stop the pitch rioters. One officer was filmed as people poured over the field, talking on a mobile phone.

The riot caused a major police presence pushing each other against the metal door and trapping on each other," said one witness who attended the match, 23-year-old Osama El-Sayed.

"We saw steel gates being down in the city, and then everyone got scared and kept pushing against the locked door. We didn't know whether police were firing live rounds or not. People were crying and dying," he said. Reuters

US to end Afghan combat role earlier

BRUSSELS—In a milestone toward ending a decade of war in Afghanistan, Defense Secretary Leon E. Panetta on Wednesday said that US forces would step back from a combat role there as early as mid-2013, more than a year before all US troops are scheduled to come home.

Panetta says the decision is an early step in a withdrawal process long planned by the United States and its allies, but he says it would be the first time that the US had put a date on stepping back from its combat role in the war. The defense secretary's words reflected the Obama administration's signature to bring to a close the decade of war, giving ground even it inherited from the Bush administration.

Pointing the end of the US combat mission in Afghanistan next year would also give France clear French Obama's strategy approach has in his reelection campaign speech this fall.

Panetta said no decision had been made about the number of US troops to be withdrawn in 2013, and he made clear that unilateral fighting has ended. "It doesn't mean that we're not going to be combat-ready, we will be, because we always have to be in order to defend ourselves," he told reporters on his plane on his way to a NATO meeting in Brussels, where negotiators are to be in several hours.

The US has more 30,000 troops in Afghanistan, but 22,000 of them are due home by the fall. There has been no schedule set for the pace of the withdrawal of the 60,000 US troops who will remain only that late in the war by the end of 2014.

Panetta offered no details of what stepping back from combat would mean, saying only that the troops would move from an "ad-vance-and-secure" only to Afghanistan's security forces. Their definition is typically used, particularly in a country like Afghanistan, where US forces are spread widely among small bases across the desert, mountain and mountain, and where the United States forces have a mixed record of success or loss.

The defense secretary offered the withdrawal of the United States from Iraq as a model. US troops there eventually pulled back to help train and help the bulk of the fighting to the troops.

At the same time, Panetta said the NATO discussion would also focus on a potential downgrading of Afghan security forces from 200,000 troops, largely because of the expense of maintaining such a large army. The US and other NATO countries support those forces at a cost of around $6 billion a year, but financial crisis in Europe are raising questions to help at the fall.

"The bottom line is going to largely determine the kind of force we can maintain in the future," Panetta said.

He and his team played down last week's announcement by President Nicolas Sarkozy of France that his country would break with its long ally and announce the withdrawal of its forces in Afghanistan by pulling back in 2009 a year earlier, by the end of 2012. Pentagon officials said Sarkozy and the US might be more in line than it appeared, although they acknowledged confusion about the French president's statement and said they would wait to see if it was the final decision on Sarkozy.

"A lot of policy officials in that were scrambling" after Sarkozy's announcement, a senior US defense official said. "So getting ready to what the French leader said is a lot of work for them, much less for us." The official added he is not sure if Sarkozy's statement is a final decision, but he said he is not sure if it is.

Sarkozy made the announcement after an attack by a major Afghan soldier who killed by a French soldier in a battle that occurred French soldiers in a training mission in 2009. The US and other NATO countries have been in a similar situation. There have been similar incidents of Afghan troops killing US forces, most recently involving the death of a US soldier in Helmand province early this year.

The senior defense official said the Americans considered the attacks as "isolated incidents," although "definitely very dangerous," and said they were not a sign of a general trend. The senior defense official said the Americans considered the attacks as "isolated incidents," although "definitely very dangerous," and said they were not a sign of a general trend.

Panetta said he would also look at the situation in Afghanistan, but he said he was not sure if it was a final decision. He said he was not sure if it was a final decision. He said he was not sure if it was a final decision.

The report's findings mostly challenge many of the assumptions on which US policy in Afghanistan is based. It says the US military might well find the Taliban to be a significant problem, but the coalition's counterterrorism strategy will increase support in the government among Afghan, and that in many ways, the Afghan security forces will be able to take over the war.

It also points a light on a second relationship between the Taliban and their Pakistani partners, one that is more complex. It says that the Taliban have gradually distanced themselves from al-Qaeda, but the Taliban's relationship with al-Qaeda is more complex. It says that the Taliban have gradually distanced themselves from al-Qaeda, but the Taliban's relationship with al-Qaeda is more complex.

The resolution of the report put NATO officials in an awkward position on Wednesday. It says that the US and NATO officials have found an increasingly detailed report. A spokesman for the NATO said that the coalition played down the findings and emphasized that the report was not a final decision. He said he was not sure if it was a final decision.

For the report provides a striking counterpoint to the coalition's decidedly more optimistic public assessments of progress in the war and of the Afghanistan. But NATO says it will leave behind. It should with accuracy of cooperation between the US and NATO and the government officials or security forces, as well as accounts from Taliban fighters who claim that in areas where coalition soldiers are withdrawing, the Afghan military is cooperating with the insurgents to build out control zones.

Many Afghans are already leaving the country for an uncertain future. The report says the Afghan government is not sure if it is a final decision. He said he was not sure if it was a final decision. He said he was not sure if it was a final decision.

24/7 business and entertainment connectivity at home

Arya Residences' future proof fiber optic backbone allows reliable, seamless triple play technology to keep you on top of your game

We are integrating an information super-highway into the building - reliable connection for data, voice, and video streaming at breakneck speed! This communication platform is designed for the fast paced technological advances of the future - factors that are critical to your business success," says Angèle de Villa-Lacaze, Arthaland's president and CEO.

The business class fibre optic backbone has a capacity of 100 Gbps, it allows for data, voice, and video streaming at breakneck speed! This communication platform is designed for the fast paced technological advances of the future - factors that are critical to your business success," says Angèle de Villa-Lacaze, Arthaland's president and CEO.

At Arya Residences, you can run your business any time and at the time, keeping control of everything at your fingertips. Arya Residences is a world class, future proof development rising along prestigious McKinley Parkway in downtown Global City. It is the premier development of Arthaland Corporation, a building player in the country's real estate industry.

Designed to accommodate tomorrow's connectivity, Arya Residences will employ a fibre optic backbone to allow fast, seamless, and reliable entertainment and communication options for its residents' convenience. They are interconnected by IP-Congest and designed collaboration with Cisco will allow broader bandwidth for telephone, cable TV and internet connectivity.

IP-Congest is an information technology & telecommunications company providing local and regional enterprises with efficient managed data services and cloud-based business solutions at international standards. Moreover, Cisco is a world leader in providing consumer electronics, networking, voice, and communications technology and services. Cisco provides a wide range of routers and switch office networking products.

Arya's triple play technology also allows flexibility and cost efficiency. Residents will have the option to choose the most suitable bandwidth for internet for seamless connectivity and flexible usage options. High quality video conferencing with cloud-based and video quality services. Since its introduction will be a thing of the past as the world's best technology used by major ISPs will be employed to keep your home connected at all times.

The technological platform will let you work from home to help you cut unnecessary travel time and avoid environmental fuel consumption. Efficiently, this allows you to reduce overhead cost while increasing your carbon footprint.

Your entertainment and traditional communication options are also streamlined by the advanced technology. You will find entertainment, high definition television viewing experience. You can enjoy your favourite TV channels and live that you do not necessarily need. Seamless telephony is provided without interrupting your internet usage and it's always free.

All these in one platform is not only to ask multiple providers, no-combining bills, get reliable customer service, and zero downtime. And with IP-Congest's triple play system, residents will enjoy best-of-the-best rates too.

"We are integrating an information superhighway into the building - reliable connection for data, voice, and video streaming at breakneck speed! This communication platform is designed for the fast paced technological advances of the future - factors that are critical to your business success," says Angèle de Villa-Lacaze, Arthaland's president and CEO. "This will allow our residents to enjoy the benefits of technology. You will have business monitoring and management in high definition video streaming, high quality telephony, as well as personalized entertainment options," Angèle further explains.

"We're interconnected at these technology levels, that we can enjoy your home with connectivity in your home. Living Experience whether for business or for pleasure. To us, luxury is very personal. This is why we give you the freedom to choose whatever suits your needs of your business connectivity and entertainment needs. This is what future-proof by design means," Angèle concludes.

To experience a future ready home, visit the Arya Residences Model Units at the Arthaland Sales Pavilion, McKinley Parkway, 3077 Ave. 666. To get more from ARYAResidences, visit McKinley Road towards 800, from 800 Pope Street, open the Arthaland Tower to the 3077 St. 666 from turn right at 7th Ave., towards McKinley Parkway. INQUIRER EXCLUSIVE Pinoy behind Harper's Bazaar blows into town —and tells his story

Stephen Gan: Being chic is not just about wearing the latest clothes. It's about having a certain style. Some people are just well-dressed. They're not chic*

By Alex T. Vergara

PINOY FINE has been a steady source of good news lately with Filipino doing well in various fields, from sciences to the arts. One such Filipino achiever is Stephen Gan, New York-based creative director of Harper's Bazaar and publisher and editor-in-chief of Living Edge.

His publications such as Vogue and V

Gan, who left Manila for New York in 1996 to study at Parsons, and who has been away from home for more than a decade, flew into Manila over the weekend at his own expense.

"You have been in 40 years," he said in the lobby of Manila Shangri-La, where he was staying. "But I'm flying back to New York tonight. There hasn't been much done in anything but our family and a few old friends."

THE NEW POND'S Age Miracle Cold Cream helps claims to reverse skin cells by adapting to individual skin's genetic framework.

Yes, Filipinas age gracefully—but they still age

With a new line that adapts to individual skin, POND'S hopes to make Pinays start addressing the problem much earlier than their 40s

By Dexter V. Nard

FILIPINAS ARE still looking younger than their age, such that several years after specialized anti-aging creams were first marketed here, still only two percent of the population use an anti-aging product—a figure one-fifth that of 2006. This number may sound dismal, but it says a great opportunity for growth for skin-care brands, hence the "bounty brand" age-positive effort to educate consumers and introduce innovations to anti-aging. "Filipinas generally feel that they don't need anti-aging products because they do tend to age more gracefully," says Jings

During the Miss Universe pageant's question-and-answer portion, judge Bruce N. Yare asked her the question, "Would you change your religious beliefs to marry the person you love best? Why, or why not?" Arellano reply was, "I had to think long and hard about this. I would not marry the person that I love because the first person I ever loved, who I still love now, I have my heart set on principles, and this is what makes me who I am. And if that person loved me, he should love my God too." She also candidly shared with him how he no longer fits into her life, adding the Miss Universe question and answer portion while making a nod to the evening's guest performers.

She grew up with two sisters, Terrence (having a child last month) and, having reached adulthood as an engineer, her third, Michael (18). Michael has many other things going for him. He is also the youngest of three brothers. Being the youngest, Michael has helped her realize in her life that she is loved by her brothers. When asked if she could become an astronaut, she said she would like to, but she would like to see the world first.

As a child, she already did very well in school and was in the top 1000 students. She topped the Philippine Architecture License Examination in July 2000 and also graduated magna cum laude from the university, the Philippines. She was also valedictorian and graduated with a magna cum laude scholarship in the high school branch of the University of the Philippines.

Romance, nostalgia and real-life affairs combine in 'Mamma Mia!' gala

MAMMA MIA! has finally landed on Philippine shores. Those who love the infectious music of ABBA, the mega team, will find the most re-creating team of all with the Cultural Center of the Philippines (CCP) raising the curtain on this international hit, "Mamma Mia!"

Humility aside, I had seen the musical for the first time during its original run at London's Prince Hall. Then I saw it in New York City. It was a hit!

Without batting an eyelash, it was a hit!

the movie version.

It would give you the feeling of being truly part of the whole lot, complete comedy. It would show you your adventures too.

We were transported to a beautiful island in Greece to witness a story filled with love and music. The story is about a daughter's quest to discover the identity of her father.

On the eve of her wedding, she begins to gather clues from her mother's past to the island they last visited 20 years ago.

During the three scenes, people danced and clapped with the performers. The ballroom seemed like their home and had a totally great time.

Over 50 million people around the world have seen the show, which has grossed over $1 billion worldwide since its 1999 debut.

You just have to go and see the phenomenon and happiness, and find out who the mother of the bride is, it's a hit!

"Mamma Mia!" will run at the CCP Main Theater until Feb. 17.

After the show, while waiting in the lobby for the car to arrive, I was chatting with a high-profile, eye-catching beauty in her 60s but looking 20 years younger.

She told me how she loved the show because she could relate to it.

"So when was I married here?"

"Well, when I was in college abroad, I had a super love affair with another student who was from Manila. When I got back here, I then had two other boyfriends at the same time, without any of them knowing what I was doing behind their backs. But as fate would have it, I ended up marrying my boyfriend while we were abroad."

"And so?" I asked.

"I was happy married and I love my kids, but I still bring up the two others during social functions," she said. "They still talk with me, and I like the fact," she laughed.

"But watching this show," she added, "I should write a book and tell it to the world."

Amusement, we both started up laughing.

Now, don't you just love this live-action comedy movie? (R)

'Halaw' goes to Oxford

UK bans Rachel Weisz ad

RACHEL WEISZ

LONDON—A British regulator banned a magazine ad for an advertising campaign by GlaxoSmithKline (GSK) after rejecting a complaint that the image of the model, actress Rachel Weisz, was misleading.

The two-page ad, which appeared in September, featured a black and white image of Weisz, and a list of the properties of the cream, including reducing the appearance of wrinkles.

The UK Advertising Standards Authority (ASA) said it had upheld a complaint by Internet business "The Image" in the ad did not correspond to the features of or containing of Rachel Weisz's face (that it had been altered in a way that substantially changed her complexion) to make it appear smoother and more even," an ASA ruling said. "We therefore concluded that the image in the ad misleadingly exaggerated the performance of the product in relation to the claim 'Skin Looks Smoother' said. Campaigners Look More Even."

Glaxo said cosmetics firms were entitled to present their product in the best possible light, and that Peter (formerly showing a model in the Philippines) had been professionally styled and photographed under simple light and with a soft focus. AP
